GERMAN NAVY MEANS BUSINESS.

Berlin Rejoices that Sailing of the Mauretania is Cancelled.

Geneva, Switzerland, May 13.—News that the Cunard liner had cancelled the sailing of the steamer

Mauretania for New York caused joy and pride in German naval circles, according to dispatches received in Basel tonight from Rhine towns.

One German newspaper is quoted as saying that it is "pleased to find that the Americans have begun to realize that the German navy means business now."

coal fields in Northern France and a position strongly held by the Germans. In the German drive on Ypres Bevin claims the capture of another point of vantage to the west of the town. Field Marshal French, commanding the British defenders, merely states that further German attacks on the Menin road were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. Further gains in Western Galicia and the Carpathians are reported by Berlin. Von Mackenay are now approaching Przemyśl in their pursuit of the Russians, while those under Gen. Von Linsingen have conquered the hills east of the Upper Stry. Gen. Col. Von Woytch, it is stated, has succeeded in penetrating as far as the district of Kielec.

ALIMONY SUIT "BON VOYAGE."

Climax of First Spouse Cause

Rival to Linger at Dock.

New York, May 13.—Francis Colgate Dale, wealthy clubman, was just about to board a ship for South America today when Mrs. Dale No. 2, when he was served with papers in a suit for $150,000 alimony brought by Mrs. Lillian P. Dale, his former wife.

Mrs. Dale No. 1 obtained a Reno divorce in 1913. She did not ask for alimony, she claims, because Dale promised to provide for her and their child Francis Colgate Dale, Jr., for the rest of their lives.

Just before Dale married, Imogene Hall James in March, she alleges he cut her off. She estimates his income at $50,000 a year, and figures that $150,000 in a lump sum ought to be enough to provide for herself and the child.

MORE GUARDS FOR ARMY.

Springfield Grounds Under Extra

Protection to Prevent Attack.

Springfield, Mass., May 13.—Additional guards were stationed about the Springfield army grounds today as a precaution against a possible isolated attack upon the arsenal and factory buildings.

The main entrance to the grounds was ordered closed to private citizens at 6:30 each night. The usual evening closing hour is 11:30 o'clock.

TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYERS STRONGEST WEAPON OF U. S.

Navy Department Officials Believe They Would Be Most Valuable Asset in Case of War with Germany—Could Change Situation in Europe.

Officials of the Navy Department and War Department are discussing informally what would be the duty of either branch of the service in case Germany provoked war with the United States. The opinion has crystallized that the best available asset of this government for the safeguarding of American ships and shipping in the approaches to the ports of neutral waters would be the sixty-two swift, well-armed torpedo boat destroyers of the navy.

The army is not considering seriously the utilization of the army for the reason that its use might necessitate an actual offensive and defensive alliance between the United States and the allies, as the United States troops would have to cooperate with the troops of the allies on the battlefields of Europe.

"Ready," Says Navy.

On the navy side, while they do not expect war, but further diplomacy, the navy is, as usual, "we are always ready."

It is seen plainly by navy officials that Great Britain has been obliged to use her torpedo boat destroyers to protect her transport ships from German submarines, and they also see that a condition may last for a very long time.

The real and sole protection for American ships, and even for British ships, would be to transfer our great force of torpedo boat destroyers into the very scene of operations of the German submarines and sweep them out of the way of American free ships and free goods. Frankly, however, we do not think that the future situation will make this necessary. If it should be necessary, there would be plenty of time to determine whether other units of the fleet would be available in the alleged submarine war zone.

SKELTON HIDES MYSTERY.

New Jersey Authorities Scent Murder

in Discovery in Woods.

Hackensack, N. J., May 13.—The theory advanced by the authorities this afternoon regarding the finding of the partially buried skeleton of a woman in a wood near Rockledge avenue, is that the killing of the woman was a carefully premeditated crime, and that she was probably taken to the spot in an automobile. More than one man, the authorities believe, being engaged in the crime.

The bit of cloth, corresponding to that on the skeleton, found quite a long distance from the grave, may lead to a clue. County Physician Ogden today completed his examination of the skeleton and stated that he believed the remains had been buried at least two years.

WAR HITS REVOLUTIONS.

Sport of South America Gone Because of Gun Shortage.

New York, May 13.—The war in Europe has had a disastrous effect on the principal industry of the Latin-American—revolutions—according to Preston McGowan, United States Minister to Venezuela, who returned with his wife and 8-year-old son on the liner Caracas today.

"South America in general has been obliged to suspend revolutions because it cannot get the materials," said Mr. McGowan. "Even offers of fabulous sums for arms and ammunition are of no avail. Neither the governments or their enemies can get the 'makings,' and consequently industry is booming, and there are tremendous opportunities for new business down there for which we have the best chances."

Grimsby, May 13.—The British travelers Cancer and Montaur, with eighteen men on board which had been missing for a month, were officially given up as lost today. They were either mined or torpedoed.

LORD MERSEY TO HEAD LUSITANIA INQUIRY

BODIES DRIVEN TO SEA BY GALE

Lusitania Searchers Forced to Abandon Quest in Ocean.

100 REPORTED SIGHTED

Cunard Line and American Consul Each Offer One Pound Reward for Recovery of Victims.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald. Queenstown, May 13.—Two boats chartered by the Cunard Line to search for bodies of Lusitania victims have been forced to put into port, owing to the increasing gale. Many of the bodies, it is feared, will be carried out into the Atlantic and never recovered. The ships, before being forced to seek port, had searched over a wide area, proceeding as far west as Glandore and Fastnet without finding any bodies. They both were about to proceed to the spot where fishermen reported seeing more than 100 floating bodies when the gale sprang up.

Many bodies, it is reported, have been seen as far west as Mistin Head, and the American consul has requested the admiralty to direct the wireless station at Cape Charles to keep a lookout for floating bodies.

The Cunard Line has offered a reward of a pound for every body brought into Queenstown. The American consul has offered an additional pound for every body of an American.

The tug Flying Fish brought in the bodies of six women and three children. Twenty-one bodies in all were brought here during the day. The bodies have been landed. Consul Frost, of the United States, has wired to the American Embassy for descriptions of the missing Americans.

Webb Waver, solicitor for Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, was advised immediately of the sighting of the bodies south of Glandore. No further news has been received of the body of Mr. Vanderbilt.

Body of Charles Frohman, who was sent to Liverpool whence it will be shipped on Saturday to the United States on an American liner.

DOUBT GERMANY CAN MEET THE DEMANDS

of maintaining the rights of the United States in safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment."

The demands for reparations, disavowal and assurances as to the future have been regarded as the least that the United States could present to Germany. To them, however, President Wilson has indirectly added another, amounting to a demand that Germany should give up her submarine program as directed against merchantmen.

"Manifestly," says the President, "submarine warfare is a violation of the principles of justice and humanity, as the last few weeks have shown, without an inevitable violation of many sacred principles of justice and humanity."

This advance stand by President Wilson is of the greatest importance, as it commits the United States definitely against the use of submarines as commerce destroyers in time of war.

May Embarrass Germany.

The very exalted place on which the President makes his appeal is likely to make it all the more difficult for Germany fully to accede to his demands.

In this connection it is the only criticism voiced against the note here. Many feared that in seeking to make it easier for the German government to yield by assuming that the note was a demand for a complete change of policy, it might have the countenance or sanction of that great government in the present situation.

It is feared here that the reluctance the President expresses to believe that the German government did not do these acts will make it relatively more difficult for Germany to acknowledge responsibility for them.

Money Reparation Expected.

What will be the results of this note with so many possibilities for the United States can, of course, be only conjectured at present. No official statement has been given in Washington of the German attitude toward the demands, but it is known that persons who are in close touch with German public opinion fear that the Kaiser and his advisers will not find it consistent with national honor to concede all the demands of the United States. There is little doubt that they will offer money reparations and possibly satisfaction of another character. But the demands for a disavowal of responsibility and a complete change of the German submarine program are such that it will be admitted that Germany will be most difficult for Germany to yield.

In the event of Germany failing to meet the demands of this government, it seems likely that a series of diplomatic relations must result. After that the situation will be just as serious as Germany cares to make it. If there is war it will be on the initiative of Germany.

That a severance of diplomatic relations is likely to result in a state of actual hostilities is fully realized here. Thought has been given to the consequences of those responsible for the course expressed in the note sent today. The universal feeling here is that this decision by the President is irrevocable; that he was never more determined to see through the course he has adopted, and that the United States once committed to the cause of bringing Germany to an observance of the laws of civilization, he will feel in honor bound to throw all the forces at his command into the battle, should war break out.

There is an absolute conviction that ways can be found by which the United States could make its material influence felt, in case its moral influence proved to be insufficient to prevail upon Germany.

SHIPS BAR TEUTON WOMEN.

Italian Liners Won't Carry

German, Austrian, Turkish.

New York, May 13.—Representatives of the leading Italian steamship lines today announced that they had received orders that hereafter they shall refuse passage to women and children of German, Austrian and Turkish nationality, and also naturalized Americans of German, Austrian or Turkish nationality.

Shortly after the war started the Italian liner refused passage to males of German or Austrian nationality, subject to seizure on the high seas.

BULGARIA PLEDGES NEUTRALITY

Premier Says Nation Will Hold

Allof Despoite Other Powers.

Vienna, May 13.—The Sofia correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse telegraphed an interview with Premier Radoslawoff in which the Premier is quoted as saying that Bulgaria will remain neutral irrespective of the action of other powers that are now wavering on the brink of war.

SAY SHE STOLE HUSBAND.

Newark Judge Reverses Usual Order of Things in Court.

Newark, N. J., May 13.—Judge Grace reversed the usual order today and held in $1,000 bail Florence Isabelle Walsh, of Jersey City, on a charge of marrying a man she knew was already wed. Robert Schultz was the man. He has vanished.

Mrs. Schultz says she told Miss Walsh to let Schultz alone, and then presented a certified copy of the record of the marriage of Robert Schultz and Florence Isabelle Walsh on May 4. Miss Walsh refused to make a statement, contenting herself with the assertion that she was not guilty.
